A sanguinary red bull-dog was one of the most marked features at the Bench Show in the early part of the week. So abnormally savage was this creature that his food was always thrown to him from a convenient distance, and his drink pushed within his reach by means of a long pole. He was in a state of sullen fury from the moment he arrived at the pavilion, and made numerous furious attempts to break his powerful chain and attack the other dogs and the spectators. On Thursday af-ternoon, while Colonel W. H. L. Barnes was standing about the middle of the hall, and explaining, doubtless, to Mr. Pond and some other gentlemen his failure to orate as advertised on the opening night, a terrible outery was heard in the direction of the bull-dog department. The red dog referred to had in some way slipped his collar and instantly seized a small child, the daughter of Mr. Enos Rockley, the lumber merchant, whom it was apparently tearing to pieces. There was probably not one of the group of gentlemen referred to lacking in physical courage, but the two things every man shrinks from "tackling" unarmed are a rattlesnake and a bull-dog. However, Colonel Barnes instantly rushed forward and seized the canine demon by the throat. Fortunately the beast's fangs contained more of the child's dress than its flesh, and by tearing the former the other gentleman released the girl from her dangerous position, and with only a bad-looking flesh-wound. The scene that followed was horribly exciting. The doubly-enraged dog turned with terrific snarls upon the Colonel, who held him with both hands by the throat. The animal weighed over fifty pounds and was unusually powerful, and after an exhausting struggle the Colonel, who is fortunately an exceptionally strong man, found his only chance was to hold the dog bodily up from the floor at arm's length. All this time a messenger had been dispatched to obtain a pistol from a Mission-Street saloon, there being none among the bystanders. At the critical moment this arrived, and the muzzle being inserted into the ear of the foaming brute, his canine intellect was distributed rather unpleasantly over the clothes of the spectators. "How do you feel, Colonel?" was asked, as the dog stopped kicking. "I feel," said that distinguished lawyer, as he held up his still cramped and livid hands, "I feel like a little brandy." It is to be hoped he got it .- San Francisco News-Let-The Pronunciation of "Aryan."

[From the Worcester Spy.]

Some inquiry having been made as to the proper pronunciation of the word "Aryan," the opinion of Profesor Whitney, of Yale College, was requested, and is given in the following note: NEW HAVEN, November 2.

My Dear Sir,-Aryan comes from the Sankrit word ar-ya, a dis-syllable, whose y is consonantal. Both for this reason, and in order to distinguish it from the very different word Arian, it is properly (and among scholars, uniformly) uttered as two syllables-Ar-yan, the ar having the same sound as our familiar are. With much respect, yours truly, W. D. WHITNEY.

Summer is fading; the broad leaves that grew
So freshly green when June was young are falling,
And all the whisper-haunted forest through
The restless birds in saidened tones are calling
From rustling hazel copes and magied dell,
"Barewell, sweet summer,
Bragrant, fruity summer,
Sweet farewell!"

Woon the windy bil, in many a field,
The honey-bees hum slow above the clover,
Gleaning the latest sweets its bloom may yield; Gleaning the latest sweets its from in a year.
And, knowing that their harvest-time is over.
Sing hair a lullaby and half a knetl,
"Farewell, sweet summer,
Honey-laden summer,
Sweet farewell!"

The little brook that babbles 'mid the ferns,
O'er twisted roots and sandy shallows playing.
Seems fain to linger in its eddled turns.
And with a plaintive, purring voice is saying
Sadder and sweeter than my song can tell. Warm and dreamy summer. Sweet farewell!" The fitful breeze sweeps down the winding line
With gold and crimson leaves before it flying;
Its gusty laughter has no sign of pain,
But in the luils it sinks to gentle sighing.

They placed him dead before her;

Her sad eyes did not quiver, saw not the blue sky o'er her. Saw not the rushing river. But down the lilac lane they walked, . Her lips all red with kisses; And softly, 'neath the blossoms, talked Of love and all life's blisses.

She called him gently, "Love, my dear!"
And listened his replying.
The silence struck her like a spear;
She knew him dead, in dying. J. F. W.

The Dutch papers say that the age of chivalry has not passed away, and cite in proof the prowess of Colonel Van der Heyden, of the Samalangen expedition. A bullet entered his left eye, and, penetrating his palate, came out of his mouth. But he remounted his horse, led the assault, took a fort, and continued to advance.
